Who we are

The Scottish Parliament
Pàrlamaid na h-Alba

We are the Equalities, Human Rights and Civil Justice Committee.

A committee is a small group of people who are Members of the Scottish Parliament, also called MSPs.

The Scottish people decide who is an MSP by voting for them in elections.

The Scottish Parliament makes laws in Scotland.

Laws are rules that tell people what they can or cannot do.

They protect people and make sure everyone is treated in a good and fair way.

The Scottish Parliament also checks what the Scottish Government is doing.

The Scottish Government decides how to run the country.

The Scottish Government and the Scottish Parliament are separate organisations.

About the Equalities, Human Rights and Civil Justice Committee

Our committee meets to talk about equalities, human rights and civil justice issues in Scotland.

Equalities are when everyone is treated fairly and has the same chance to enjoy a great life.

Human rights are basic rights and freedoms every person in the world should have for their whole life.

Civil means anything to do with ordinary people.

Justice means people are treated fairly by the law.

Civil justice issues are problems between people and organisations about things like money, housing or family.

What this booklet is about

This booklet is about a new bill. A bill is a document that could become a law.

The Bill is called the Disability Commissioner (Scotland) Bill.

Go to our website to find out more about the Bill

www.parliament.scot/bills-and-laws/bills/disability-commissioner-scotland-bill

The Bill will become part of the law in Scotland if the MSPs agree with it.

What the Bill is about

The Bill says there should be a Disability Commissioner for Scotland.

A commissioner is a person who is officially chosen to do a special piece of work.

The Disability Commissioner for Scotland will speak up for disabled people and do work to protect their rights.

Rights are freedoms people should have that are protected by laws.

The Disability Commissioner for Scotland will be independent.

© The Scottish Government

Independent means they will not be part of the Scottish Government.

The Scottish Government will not be able to tell the Disability Commissioner for Scotland what to do.

In this booklet we call the Disability Commissioner for Scotland, the Commissioner for short.

What the Commissioner will do

The Bill says the Commissioner will

- advocate for disabled people in Scotland

Advocate means speak up for someone or something.

- review laws, policies and practice about the rights of disabled people

Review means look at something to see how good or bad it is.

Policies are guidelines about the best way to do something.

Practice means how something is done.

- support service providers for disabled people to follow best practice

Service providers are people or organisations that are paid to give services, like health or care services.

Best practice means the best way to do something.

The Bill says the Commissioner will

- do research about the rights of disabled people

Research is work done to find out new information about a subject.

- investigate service providers to find out how they include the rights of disabled people

The Commissioner will only do this for devolved matters

Investigate means look at something closely and find out the facts about it.

Devolved matters are things the Scottish Parliament can make laws about, like health or housing.

The Bill says the Commissioner should

- get disabled people and disability organisations involved in the work they do

- use inclusive communication

Inclusive communication means making sure as many people as possible can contact the Commissioner and get information.

What disability means in the Bill

The Bill will follow what is written about disability in a law called the Equality Act 2010.

The Equality Act 2010 says a disability is a substantial and long-term illness or problem that affects your body or your brain.

Substantial means an illness or problem that has a big effect on normal day-to-day activities.

Long-term means an illness or problem that lasts for 12 months or more.

The Bill says the Commissioner must

- follow the ideas in an agreement called the UN Convention on the Rights of Disabled People

The UN Convention on the Rights of Disabled People is a human rights agreement between lots of countries that says disabled people have the same rights as everyone else.

- follow best practice about equal opportunities

Equal opportunities are when every person has the same chances in life for things like work or education.

Tell us what you think

We want you to tell us what you think about the Bill.

We have written some questions for you to answer. This is called a survey.

The questions are on pages 15 to 23 of this booklet. You do not have to answer all of the questions.

Thank you for helping us. What you tell us is important. It will help the MSPs make the Bill better and decide if it should become a law.

About the survey

When you fill in the survey, do not give information about someone else that could tell other people who they are.

This means information like their name, address or where they work.

We will not use parts of your answers to the survey if

- you give information about someone else
- you use offensive language.

Offensive means bad language that might upset people.

How to fill in the survey

To fill in the survey, type your answer in the box under each question.

When you have filled in the survey, save it to your computer.

Attach it to an email and send it to this address
