

Briefing for the Citizen Participation and Public Petitions Committee on petition PE1955: 'Provision of public toilets', lodged by John Wood

Brief overview of issues raised by the petition

The petitioner is calling on the Scottish Parliament to urge the Scottish Government to ensure local authorities provide good quality, clean and accessible public toilets by:

- placing a statutory duty on local authorities to provide adequate public toilets; and
- ensuring sufficient funding is available to local authorities to meet this requirement.

Background information

Although public toilets have been a feature of UK towns and cities since the Victorian period, local authorities are under no obligation to provide them. Unlike other services such as education and social care, there is no legislation requiring councils to provide public toilets.

The Royal Society for Public Health's 2019 report, Taking the p\*\*\*, shows that the decline of the public toilet is a UK-wide phenomenon. This is also demonstrated in a 2018 BBC report based on FOI requests sent to all local authorities across the UK. Although many did not respond, the data is fairly comprehensive for Scotland. The report found that that the number of local authority-run public toilets in the Highlands council area fell from 118 in 2010 to 92 in 2018. This was the second biggest decrease of all Scottish local authorities, after North Ayrshire. See map below (red shows reductions):

The above map, compiled by the BBC, shows that 15 of 28 Scottish councils responding had fewer public toilets in 2018 than they did in 2010.

Scottish Government position

In response to a Parliamentary Question earlier this year from Conservative MSP, Jamie Halcro Johnston, the Scottish Government confirmed that it does not monitor the number of public toilets, accessible public toilets or Changing Places toilets across Scotland. A similar question was asked in 2012 with the Government responding:

“The provision of public toilets, facilities for disabled people and child changing spaces is a matter for local authorities, and the Scottish Government does not issue guidance regarding their provision...
...Building standards require owners of certain buildings, to which the public have access, to provide sanitary facilities, including accessible facilities suitable for use by disabled people and baby changing facilities, when the buildings are being constructed, altered or converted. Such buildings include large shops, public entertainment and assembly buildings, restaurants, cafes and public houses.”

During Session 5, Green MSP John Finnie asked the Government whether it could explore making the provision of public conveniences a statutory local authority duty, and ensure that necessary funding is made available to councils to address a reported shortage of this public health resource. The Government responded:

“The Scottish Government does not have direct responsibility for public toilets. The responsibility for public conveniences rests with the owner, which can be a variety of different bodies, such as local authorities, businesses, community organisations and tourist boards. The majority of public conveniences in Scotland are under private ownership, for example in shopping centres, rather than under local authority control.

At a summit on 14 September, the Cabinet Secretary for Rural Economy and Tourism met with a number of public bodies and national park authorities and asked that they examine potential solutions to tackling visitor management issues across Scotland. This group are exploring how they might make better use of collective public sector resource.

As well as this, the Scottish Government are also forecasting the continuation of the Rural Tourism Infrastructure Fund into 2021-22, which will complement the work of this group. So far the fund has contributed £9m over 3 years, leveraging in match funding, to support the installation of car parks, toilets and waste disposal facilities in rural hotspots.”

To summarise, the Scottish Government are not responsible for the provision, funding, maintenance or monitoring of public toilets. Furthermore, Scottish councils are not legally obliged to provide public toilets, and many have been closing facilities in fairly significant numbers over recent decades.

Public toilet provision in the Highlands area

The petition, although referring to Scotland as a whole, has a focus on the Highlands area. Highland Council website includes a map of public toilet provision across its local authority area. Members will note a high number of toilets available to the public through the Council's Comfort scheme, with businesses and organisations registering to become providers of toilet facilities. Comfort Scheme grants range from £50 to £300 per month on a 7- or 12-month basis and are offered as a contribution towards the running costs of the toilets. Other local authorities, such as South Ayrshire and Aberdeenshire, also run their own comfort schemes.

Cost savings included in recent council proposals

During the past five years several councils have discussed toilet closure proposals as part of budget considerations. These often include estimates of proposed savings. Members may be interested in the figures included in the following:

Local government finances and statutory obligations

According to the Scottish Government, local government in Scotland spent almost £22 billion in 2019-20 (pre-Covid). The Scottish Government's position is that “councils operate independently of central government and are accountable to their electorates for the services they provide”. However, they are not exactly financially independent. Table 1 (below) shows that the largest single part of local government's income in 2019-20 came from the Scottish Government, in the form of General Revenue Grant (GRG) plus specific/ring-fenced Scottish Government grants.

Table 1: sources of Scottish local government income 2019-20

	2019-20 (£bn)	% total revenue
General Revenue Grant	6.9	32%
Other grants (mainly ring-fenced SG)	2.6	12%
Non-Domestic Rates	2.9	14%
Council Tax	2.5	12%
Customer and client receipts	2.7	13%
Other grants, reimbursements and contributions	3.8	18%
TOTAL REVENUE	21.4

“Core revenue funding” mainly consists of GRG plus a guaranteed allocation of Non-Domestic Rate (NDR) income. In theory, how this core budget is spent is up to local authorities to decide. In reality, local authorities have statutory duties to provide certain services, so there are limits on this freedom (an idea of the extent of these duties is provided by this Glasgow City Council publication).

Trends in local government financial settlement are explored in this SPICe briefing from earlier this year.
